

CLASS OF 1993
TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY

THE ASSOCIATION OF FORMER STUDENTS

Howdy

May 1999

To keep everyone up-to-date, especially those that were not able to attend the five-year reunion last fall, the Class of '93 held the official dedication of their third class gift, a woodcarving, in the NSC during the reunion on September 12. The woodcarving is the seventh in a series constructed by Rodney Hill, associate dean in the College of Architecture, and his wife Susan. The previous six carvings, located in the hall that runs between the food court and the MSC Flagroom, were finished in 1973. Hill said this carving took him approximately one-and-a-half years to complete and it represents the major student life changes that have taken place at A&M during the 20-year period between 1973 and 1993.

Brandon Daugherty '93, member of the class gift committee and class agent, said in his welcome speech, "The Class of 1993 is proud to dedicate the third and final of our class gifts. We first gave the 12th Man lettering on the Alumni side of Kyle Field. Then earlier this morning, we gave a $10,000 Muster Endowment." Chris Sanders, the Class of '93 v.p., said the committee consisted of people representing all different parts of campus life including the Student Rec. Center and Housing Assignments. "We wanted a very diverse representation," Sanders said. "In December of 1994, the pieces of the woodcarving started to come together and we went through a year's time of schematic representation, and now we have a final version." Julie Payne-Daugherty '93, member of the class gift committee, said the woodcarving represents students from all walks of life. "We didn't only want to put changes that have taken place, but changes that have made a significant impact on student life."

Texas A&M University President Dr. Ray M. Bowen addressed the audience at the dedication. "Through the dedication of this woodcarving, your class has added a significant dimension to this school. Student leadership is a fundamental value which distinguishes Texas A&M from every other University," Bowen said. Payne-Daugherty presented plaques consisting of small sections of the blueprints from the woodcarving to individuals who helped make the panel possible. Hill also presented the Class of '93 with a large bag of wood chips from the woodcarving and invited all students present from the Class of '93 to grab a handful.

Brandon Daugherty unveiled the walnut-paneled woodcarving which shows Albritton Tower with the Aggie Ring crest on top. The Koldus building, shuttle bus routes and a crane putting in a modular dorm are also featured. The carving depicts the emergence of the 700 student organizations on campus. In closing, Daugherty said, "You can't just walk up and take a quick glimpse and catch everything." "I'm just now noticing that there are a lot of things that I didn't even know would be included."

Vision 2020

Texas A&M In The Next Century

A "private university" component would be incorporated into Texas A&M University if one of the boldest recommendations of an envisioning task force is adopted in the quest to propel Texas' land grant institution into the ranks of the nation's top universities. The university-within-a-university concept is but one of the ideas being advanced as part of Texas A&M's Vision 2020 project. The intention is to continue the academic evolution of the university so that it is generally considered one of the 10 best public universities in America by the year 2020, while retaining, or even enhancing, many of the unique features that define the university.

One of the more ambitious task force recommendations is to quadruple the university's private endowment, managed by the Texas A&M Foundation, by the year 2020. Not all the recommendations would require major expenditures - many are matters of resolve or reorientation of perspectives. However, some would require significant financial commitments, including a few that could prove prohibitively costly, such as the proposal to attract more faculty of national and international prominence. Another proposal seeks to achieve per-student academic program funding. Other goals include:

- * Creating an environment in which a faculty member could win a Nobel Prize or other preeminent worldwide recognition on the basis of scientific or scholarly work conducted at Texas A&M.
- * Triple the number of faculty who are members of the National Academy of Sciences or the National Academy of Engineering.
- * Gaining recognition for having the best undergraduate academic experience at a top-tier research university.
- * Strengthening the arts and sciences programs so they advance significantly in stature on a national basis.
- * Increasing the proportion of graduate students to 25 percent of the total student population - from the current level of 18 percent.
- * Establishing a culture that values diversity, in which Texas A&M's student body, faculty and staff mirror the constituencies that the university services.
- * Significantly enhancing the university's library and information technology infrastructure and capabilities.

Vision 2020 recommendations are expected to be finalized and formally announced April 30 at a banquet in Texas A&M's new special events center, Reed Arena. They will then be reviewed by university officials at various levels to determine implementation possibilities.

Sterling C. Evans Library Annex formally opened recently with a ribbon-cutting ceremony. President Dr. Ray M. Bowen '58, Student Body President Laurie Nickel '98 and Graduate Student Council President Anneliese Reinemeyer were among the University dignitaries in attendance. Fred Heath, dean and director of Evans Library, said the annex was designed around the needs of the students. "It was meant to be a facility where students could interact with one another, with the staff and with the technologies that would enable them to engage in research and project development," he said. "The student leaders worked closely with the library staff to articulate their constituency's priorities and concerns." Reinemeyer said the library is a memorial to past writers and to the future generation of writers. "Each title, each book, each golden leaf represents a piece of the world," she said. Nickel recounted her experiences as a campus tour guide. "Students never ask me where the library is, but they soon find they will spend more time at the library than at a football game or at the Rec Center," she said. Four library-system expansions have occurred in the '90s. In 1994, the West

Campus Library opened; in 1997, the Policy Sciences and Economics Library opened and in 1998, the Cushing Memorial Library reopened after being restored. "The official opening of the annex to Sterling C. Evans Library is a milestone in library development," he said.

AGGIE BONFIRE

ENDOWMENT

Since 1909, Aggie Bonfire has been a cornerstone symbol of Texas A&M University. Unfortunately, the costs associated with Aggie Bonfire have tripled over the last 30 years. Increasing costs of safety measures, equipment, construction, and fuel are some of the main reasons for this dramatic increase. Additionally, the costs of cleaning the Bonfire cut site are expected to increase. These increasing costs are threatening the very existence of the Aggie Bonfire tradition.

The Aggie Bonfire Endowment provides a permanent, stable source of funds for Bonfire. It will ease the pressure of annual fund raising and allow the students to focus on the safety and leadership aspects of Bonfire. It will also give supporters the satisfaction of knowing that their gifts will help build not just this year's Bonfire, but all the Bonfires in future years.

Ronnie is busy with Bastrop county issues in his 4th month as County Judge. He was thrown in the water head first, but he's swimming! Ty is planning ways not to be busy during her summer vacation from teaching at Bastrop High.

Brandon was promoted to manager of the Evansville regional office of Alt & Witzig Eng., a consulting firm dealing with environmental and geotechnical engineering. He also joined Boy Scout Troop 363, as an assistant scout master. Julie (Payne) is manager of residence education for the University of Southern Indiana. She recently ended her run as Suzanne in 'Don't Dress for Dinner.' They both enjoy singing as members of the choir at Central United Methodist Church. Unfortunately, they have moved again, but this time they moved into their first home (even though they are still renting). E-mails are: brandon - aggietaz93@aol.com; and julie - juliedaugh@aol.com

Jill is hanging in there as zoo keeper (ha ha). Rebecca was two in March and Allison is nine months old. Jill also stays busy with her Longaberger business, Precept Ministries, and the school board. She FINALLY has email - rjnic@inu.net
